Get your camo on!

story by morgan leclair

As you may or may not know, I duck hunt...a lot. This is my way to tell the world about my obsession.

From the outside, duck hunting may look like a very expensive hobby and not worth the money. This, in my opinion, is offset due to the fact you can get good deals on almost anything and if you use it enough you get your money's worth.

First you will need a good, solid jacket to get you through the milder and colder parts of the season.

The Cabela's PIT Jacket is an economical and quality jacket, it has 100 grams of Thinsulate insulation which is enough for almost any kind of weather and the jacket is waterproof. This jacket retails anywhere from $119.99 to $134.99.

Another alternative is the Cabela's Northern Flight Wading Jacket which has a little less insulation but it is pretty warm overall, it retails from $89.99 to $99.99.

Now, depending on the type of hunting you will be doing, you will need waders for most of your marsh hunting, these can get expensive but like almost everything you can find a relatively good deal.

You can get the Cabela's standard wader with 3mm neoprene for $119.99; this is not the toughest on the market but will do the job. If you want something a little more durable for only $20 more, you can get 5mm neoprene which is more durable and will last longer.

This is the clothing that you will mainly need to get started; combined the maximum price is only around $250.

If you use these two pieces of clothing (a jacket and waders) for five duck hunts, you spend $50 per hunt and that is equal to a weekend of activity for a teenager.

You can always buy accessories later on down the road if you get into it, and always add to your repertoire of camouflage clothing.

Candidate Q and A

Q: Most embarrassing moment of high school ... ?

Helen - "When Jordan Gosch threw a last second shot at the buzzer and I caught it on the side lines when I was cheering."

Hannah - "Wiping out on the bleachers my freshman year at a game after it had rained."

Stormi - "Probably when I fell out of a chair and broke my tail bone. I had to carry a pillow around to sit on."

Josh - "Having to give my brother Jeff and Matt Simon piggy-back rides to class freshman year."

Nikki - "My most embarrassing moment of high school occurred during the cross country race at Berean, in which Evan Landes lost his shoe, and then proceeded to beat me, and win the race."

AJ - "The time I got poison ivy on my face."

Q: In ten years, I hope to be ... ?

Helen - "A dental hygenist!"

Kendra - "Out of college, working."

Hannah - "Working as a physical therapist and possibly starting a family."

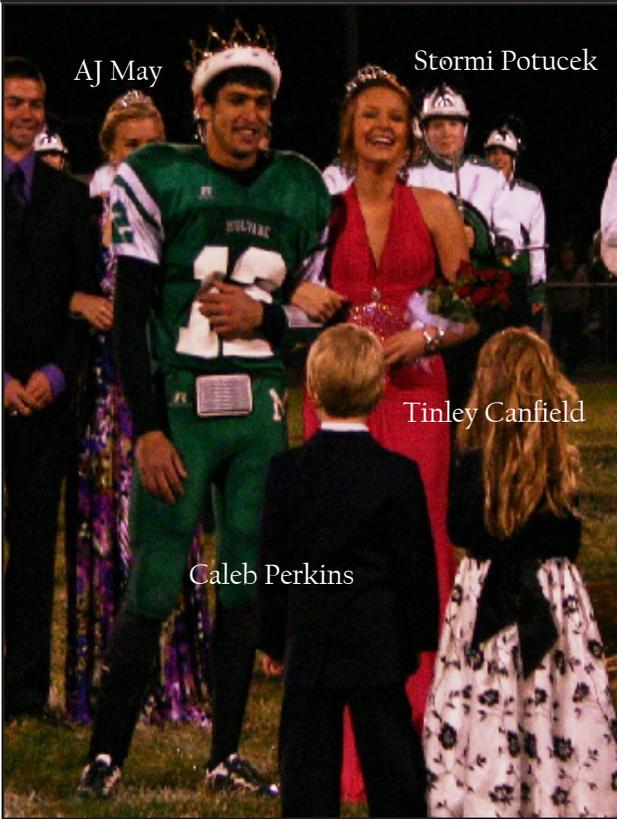

Stormi - "Living in Colorado with a husband and two adopted children, with a lot of money."

Josh - "Starting a family and working as a psychologist somewhere."

Wyatt - "Living life to the fullest."

Nikki - "Finishing school."

AJ - "A MAN."

How To: Make a Tigger Costume

feature by: kc ayala

1. Get materials: orange pants, long sleeved shirt, electrical tape, clear packing tape, cotton balls, head band, card board, orange paint, scissors.
2. Cut long strips of black tape and wrap around legs, arms and torso while wearing the orange clothes to create the stripes.
3. Measure from your belly button to below the breast bone. Take clear packing tape and make it double sided.
4. Place the tape on the belly and stick cotton balls on the tape. Then cover the cotton balls with clear packing tape.
5. Do the same with for the tail. Stripe the tail and the area that isn't striped paint orange. Clip the tail to the back of the pants with safety pins.
6. Cut out half circles out of the cardboard that are about 1 1/2 inches long. Paint them to look like tiger ears then tape them to the headband.
7. This part is optional: using face paint, draw on whiskers and stripes.

The non-denominational Autumn festival

October 31 is an important day to many people throughout the country. What do I mean when I refer to October 31? Martin Luther's Protestant Reformation? Nevada being submitted as the 36th State? The formation of the Boy Scouts of the Philippines? The birthday of Vanilla Ice? (or maybe better known by his real name, Robert Matthew Van Winkle?) No, of course I don't. I'm referring to the Celtic-rooted Satan-hugging dark, dark ritual of Halloween.

In my research of Halloween, I decided to go to the most unbiased, clear and accurate websites to learn about one of America's favorite holidays. Google brought me exposingsatanism.org, and alas the truth has been revealed! Look at the warm, inviting welcome message:

Thanks to exposingsatanism.org, I have been taught that the most mundane things about Halloween are the strongest practices of Celtic-rooted Satanism that there is available. Imagine the typical angry pastor sitting in a chair on his front porch swinging his cane around and yelling at kids walking by telling them how they're condemned, this is what I see. Maybe even the local Crazy-Jesus-Man.

So, let's read through the article together, and I'll let you follow my thought process:

"Where did it begin? It began over 2000 yrs ago with people known as the Celts." At this point, I'm already sold on this man's incredibility. If he wanted to be a credible information source, you would think he wouldn't say that the given events happened 2,000 "yrs" ago.

"What is it all about? Halloween is a festival. It was held to honor the Samhain the so called 'lord of death'. Samhain, lord of death, called together the wicked spirits that within the past 12 months had been condemned to inhabit the bodies of animals. To exorcise these ghosts, you would have to set out food and provide shelter for them during the night. If they were satisfied with your offerings, they would leave you in peace. If not, they were believed to cast an evil spell on you."

Okay, I can deal with this. Sure, it sounds kind of demonic, but, they were just being precautionary. Everyone was all into ghosts and demons and that kind of thing back then. It's kind of like what iPods are to us now. Except iPods are never pleased with my offerings of love and affection, and curse me with being a piece of crap. Besides, this was all pishy-poshy village hocus-pocus stuff. Surely this guy doesn't still believe in this stuff, right?

"In modern day Satanism and Witchcraft covens, this is the day when Satan himself comes to 'fellowship' with his followers. Many changes have occurred over the centuries, but one thing has stayed the same, the practice of giving an 'offering' has stayed the same. Oh we do it under the name of fun but what is the real meaning? Is it still the same as in the old days? I say the answer is YES."

Again, this man's credibility is slipping through my fingers. Yrs at least is an abbreviation, but "ha" is not an abbreviation for had. That, and are you serious?! Yes sir, it is under the name of fun, is it not? Surely to engage in something as the real meaning, one would say, "Yes, I'm going to dress up as a slutty Dorothy or nurse IN THE NAME OF SATAN." I'm pretty sure no one dressed up as a Mighty Morphin' Power Ranger when they were nine years old just to proclaim the name of Satan. I believe people can do one thing with intentions to do another, but I simply don't view this as the case here. The common people have taken this Celtic-rooted tradition and turned it into a secular engagement for the pursuit of candy, not condemnation. Besides, not every little thing about Halloween is demonic, is it?

"The word jack-o-Lantern is an abbreviation of 'Jack of the Lantern.' Jack is another name for joker or Satan. The jack-o-lantern is a Halloween idol that keeps alive an ancient symbol of demonic superstition."

Uh oh! Jack is the number one most popular name in Australia, Wales, New Zealand, The United Kingdom, Ireland, and Scotland, and you're telling me that all those millions of unknowing parents inadvertently named their kids SATAN?? What have they done! That, and according Heidi Murkoff, the author of the bestselling book "What To Expect When You're Expecting," the name Jack is a nickname for John, which means "God is gracious." Saying God is gracious, and saying your baby is named after Lucifer himself are two very, very misleading definitions, sir.

I guess the real question I'm posing with this article is: "If you celebrate Halloween without the intention of praising Satan, and rather getting candy, are you still being Satanic? Or is the motive needed in order for it to be a Satanic celebration?"

You can dwell in its possible religious undertones, and whether or not Satan is involved in this candy marketing day, but as for me, I'm going around and getting dressed up anyway and getting candy.

short disclaimer:

I am not encouraging nor discouraging Satanism, or any form of religion. I am simply encouraging Halloween to be viewed as a secular, fun event for the public, without any outdated religious undertones. This article was written on a secular, non-religious state of mind, and should not be taken as an offense to any world religion. Except, maybe that candy is delicious. You can quote me on that.

Pumpkin Festival

by: mercedes bird

Friday, October 9, during the homecoming football game, FCCLA had their event called the Pumpkin Festival. The idea came from a member after doing one last year.

FCCLA stands for Family, Career, and Community Leaders of America. There are currently 62 members signed up for FCCLA. Of those, only eight participated in the Festival.

They have not come to a complete total of how much was earned because they are still selling items. The money is being raised for FCCLA to be able to go to districts.

Pumpkins are still for sale in the FACS room, $2 for a small or $4 for a large.

Robot construction for the win

story by: rylee dulaney

Men and women of our modern age rely on various electronic appliances and devices for daily living, but very few dare to accept the challenge of constructing such a machine, especially for recreational uses.

The concept of robots has been around for several years, commonly associated with the future. Robots to help people or cook for us. Robots to assist the blind and elderly.

Not to mention the idea of robots to become a superior mental complex beyond humanity and destroy the human race (as seen in The Terminator, Runaway, Blade Runner, Robocop, the Replicators in Stargate, the Cylons in Battlestar Galactica, The Matrix, and I, Robot.)

So, lucky for us, we have a program at our own high school to start people at young ages to become such robotic-engineers.

Mrs. Woods, first-year assistant advisor for this program, filled me in. BEST (Boosting Engineering Science and Technology) is a non-profit, volunteer-based organization whose mission is to inspire students to pursue careers in engineering, science, and technology through participation in a sports-like, science and engineering-based robotics competition.

It is Mr. Stapp's tenth year for being commander-in-chief for his one-robot army.

Each school is provided kits of equipment, game rules and given six weeks to design, build, and test a small radio-controlled robot that outperforms other robots.

So no, they don't create robots to destroy and mutilate the other team's robots. Though, what better way to stick it to our rivals than to shoot laser beams and it take to partake in BEST?

We meet three times a week for three hours, but you must make at least one meeting per week.

What is the greatest part of being in BEST?

The best part of being in BEST?...haha, lame puns... It's being known as that smart kid who builds robots, which is definitely going to be useful for aiding in the robot revolution in 2012.

I'm in charge of documenting everything that anyone wants to do to the robot, and creating computer drawings of the robot in high-tech software called AutoCAD 2009.

This year's robot is supposed to put together chemical formulas to earn points.

This year we're modeling a oil refinery and the theme is "high octane."

Are you just in BEST so that when machines are our overlords you won't be destroyed?

Well sir, I must confess that this fear does rank very high, but I am actually use this robot building to learn about how to control them so I can become the supreme overlord.

It sounds like Jon Walker has the right idea.

See how I can write a robot article and not reference Transformers? Success.

How much commitment does

Halloween haunts

story by: nathan strack

Surely you're familiar with this common practice that commences when the month of October descends upon us.

Something you used to do with your friends that terrified you when you were younger. Care to take a quick look at the origin of this practice, in the light, (or rather darkness.) of the holiday season?

It starts with, "Dare you to say 'Bloody Mary' three times into the mirror with the lights off!" Usually at midnight, by yourself.

Does this bring back memories? Bleh! It does for me. Usually, after speaking "Bloody Mary," into a dark mirror, and turning around three times, the participant has his/her eyes clawed out, heart stabbed or soul taken by a very upset ghost.

Though the origin of this "ritual" has many variations, the main story behind the myth is that carrying out such a practice mocks Queen Mary I.

You see, her life was littered with false pregnancies and miscarriages. So you can imagine this is a tender subject for the spirit.

So be careful the next time you're brushing your teeth in the dark... you may get more than you've bargained for.

The girl's golf team has been under the radar all season. While they haven't had very much attention, they continue to play at a very high level.

They have placed third as a team in several of their tournaments this season, and have traveled to several different courses.

Of these courses "Hesston was my favorite because that is where I got my best score ever (94)," said Taylor Becker.

Megan Reed would choose Sierra Hills as her favorite course because it is a par 3, and she gets to use her irons.

The latest tournament the girls participated in was located at the Cheney Golf Course; this was the regional tournament. The girls finished third and Lauren Bonewell led the team as she placed sixth individually.

With this dominating performance at regionals, the varsity team is headed to state today, which is hosted by Nickerson at Highlands Golf Course in Hutchinson. "The Highlands is a hard course," says Reed but the girls still have high expectations for their state tournament.

The members competing today are seniors Bonewell, Becker, Megan Cooper, Reed, sophomore Sierra Muse and freshman Liz Sooby.

"I am very proud of you ladies and we had a fantastic year," Coach Howe added.
